Introduction to Engaging Children in Permaculture Course

with Lusi Alderslowe and Lexington Love

Why this day matters

Many children today are increasingly disconnected from the natural world, yet the need for ecological understanding and earth care skills has never been greater.

The Engaging Children in Permaculture CPD offers a practical and inspiring introduction to permaculture ideas for children of all ages. Through hands-on learning, games, storytelling and outdoor activities, you'll explore ways to make complex ideas simple, meaningful and engaging.

You'll experience activities first-hand, explore how permaculture principles can be woven into everyday learning, and discover resources that support confident, creative delivery.

What you'll experience

- Hands-on activities that introduce permaculture in playful, accessible ways
- Games and storytelling to explore earth care, people care and fair share
- Practical ideas for outdoor learning and group work
- Time to reflect, adapt and explore how activities fit your own setting

You'll leave with

- Practical activities ready to use with children
- Confidence to bring permaculture themes into outdoor and community learning
- Tools to nurture ecological understanding and responsibility
- Ideas to embed permaculture into the curriculum or community programmes

This course is ideal for teachers, outdoor educators, Forest School leaders, parents, youth workers and anyone wanting to grow a culture of care and ecological awareness with children.
